

Originally hailing from Dumas, TX, Anji Taylor made Greenville her home in 2008, immersing herself in the vibrant local community. Her educational journey began at the University of Texas at Arlington, where she pursued her passion for social work. In 1999, she earned her Bachelor's Degree in Social Work, followed by a Master's of Science in Social Work in 2002.

For the past 23 years, Anji has dedicated her career to serving children and families. Her expertise extends to working with the elderly, providing invaluable home health services. As a Licensed Master Social Worker (LMSW), Anji brings a unique perspective and a deep understanding of the social and emotional needs of individuals in our community.

Anji's commitment to education goes beyond her professional career. She is a firm believer in the power of community involvement and has actively contributed to various organizations within the Greenville educational landscape. She serves on the Greenville Educational Enrichment Foundation, where she works diligently to secure additional resources and opportunities for students and is also an active participant in various Parent-Teacher Associations (PTAs), fostering collaboration between parents, teachers, and administrators.

In addition to her professional and community endeavors, Anji's personal life is deeply intertwined with Greenville's educational system. She is married to Thomas Taylor, a proud graduate of GHS High School, class of 1992. Together, they have two children, both attending Greenville ISD. Their oldest child is a member of the class of 2025, while their youngest is a part of the class of 2028. As a parent, Anji has a firsthand understanding of the challenges and aspirations of students and their families, which further fuels her dedication to improving the educational experience for all.
